COLUMBUS, O., Jan. 23.—By another fantastic mental quirk, James Newsome, glib young Negro convict, set justice topsy-turvy today for a second time, repudiating the confession which a few days ago unlocked the jail gates at Ashland, O., for Dr. Ira Suter of Mansfield, who for eighty-four days was believed guilty of writing extortion notes.

"A trick to get notoriety so I could get help to show I never was guilty of a Lorain County robbery—that's all it was," Newsome unexpectedly told an International News Service representative while an Ohio Penitentiary official sat nearby, listening.

Talking excitedly through the "bull pen" screen, Newsome told the reporter that his blackmail con-

LIMA, O., Jan. 23.—Lloyd Zeigler, 19, Mansfield Reformatory prisoner who repudiated a confession that he and two other youths were the slayers of art Truesdale and Thelma Woods, was to be returned to the prison today.

Zeigler was brought here for investigation after he had "confessed" to reformatory officials that he and two companions murdered Truesdale and Miss Woods and dumped their bodies into an abandoned swarry pit near here last summer.

He repudiated his statements after he was brought here for questioning, admitting he had "confessed" only in the hope of gaining freedom from the prison.

Prison, liberating Suter, was as false as his admission of the murder of Dr. James T. Roby Mansfield dentist.

Newsome's story about the Roby murder, discovered to have been a hoax, created wide excitement until it was repudiated.

Penitentiary officials were expected to notify Ashland authorities at once that Newsome has "told another story." Dr. Suter left the Ashland County Jail Thursday.

Dr. C. H. Creed, chief of the bureau of classification and examination at the prison, heard the statement. The latest trick of Newsome's imaginative brain was performed by two international News Service, assisted by Warden Preston E. Thomas, was seeking an explanation of the wave of recent "confessions" of unsolved crimes.

"I want to show up Ashland, Richland and Lorain Counties—they wouldn't believe me when I said I never robbed a gas station at Kipton, O." the young convict said.

"Suter is out now, but they can never prove me guilty of writing those extortion letters," he con-

PIQUA, O., Jan. 23.—Claiming ignorance of the death of Richard "Dick" Shepard, 65 year old race horse trainer, Mrs. Lydia Swales, 74, charged with first degree murder, today blasted the suicide pact theory advanced by authorities as responsible for the product.

Virtually all the leading figures in the industry descended on the house ways and means committee, holding hearings on a tax increase bill.

The manufacturers are a unit in opposing the treasury's plan for a five per cent tax on new passenger cars, three per cent on trucks and two and a half per cent on accessories.

George M. Graham of Detroit, representing the National Automobile Chamber of Commerce; Thomas P. Henry of Detroit, American Automobile Association; F. W. A. Vesper of St. Louis, National Automobile Dealers Association; A. L. Viles of New York, Rubber Association of America; Harvey L. Cobb, American Motorists Association, and members of congress appeared before the committee as witnesses.

Sitting in her jail cell at Troy, the housekeeper denied writing the explanatory note found near her unconscious body and the lifeless form of Shepard in the latter's bedroom Thursday evening. However, authorities said the note was in Mrs. Swales' handwriting.

She remembered nothing from early Wednesday morning, she informed her inquisitors. How the gun was opened, who fired the two fatal shots into Shepard's brain, and who was responsible for the explanatory note were mysteries to her, she declared.

Backing the plea but remaining in the background were Alfred P. Sloan, Jr., president of General Motors; Walter P. Chrysler, representatives of Henry Ford, and other manufacturers.

While these spokesmen were opposing the treasury's plan to raise $20,000,000 in new taxes, fresh criticism came from other sources.

Rep. Crisp (D) of Georgia, member of the committee, announced that he would seek to substitute new sources of taxation for the miscellaneous taxes urged by the treasury, such as a tax on bank book.

The writer of the note also admitted firing the fatal shots, but declared the gun was accidentally discharged.

Attorney W. A. Haines of Troy has been engaged as Mrs. Swales' counsel by her son, William, who discovered the tragedy after entering the Shepard home through a window Wednesday. Monday has been set as a tentative date for arraignment.

OHIO STREAMS RISE FROM HEAVY
RAINS; MISSISSIPPI RECEDES

By International News Service
Downpours of rain drove Ohio rivers and streams rapidly toward flood stage in scattered parts of the state today.

Weather Observer William H. Alexander declared at Columbus, however, that "there is no immediate danger of flood," adding that "the rain appears to be about over."

The Hocking River, Sunday Creek and Margaret Creek were boating at Athens after hard rains during the night and early today.

Water was still three feet below flood stage, however.

Pomeroy and the Ohio River district in southeastern Ohio were lashed all night by a driving rain.

After receding yesterday, the Muskingum River was pushed upward as tributaries were filled today by several hours of consistent rain, according to reports from Zanesville.

GLENDORA, Miss., Jan. 23.—An the situation is well in hand today had brought new courage and hope to the 50,000 inhabitants of Mississippi delta's stricken flood area.

A stream of food, clothing and medical supplies, sent by coast guard boats to the concentration points where refugees are being housed and cared for until they can return to their flooded homes had eased the danger of further suffering.

The government should rely chiefly on borrowing this year and balance the budget by the 1934 fiscal year, as recommended by the treasury, the report said.

A LOT of people feel just now like the old Negro who came to the crossroads and saw one sign pointing to heaven and another sign pointing to hell. He shook his head and said to himself: "Ef Ah goes to Heben, gotta fly all the while; ef Ah goes to Hell gotta jump all the while. Ah giss Ah'll jes' set here an' rest mahse'f."

B UT resting is rusting. This is true of dollars.

I F those of us who have money just leave it to rest—the wheels of industry keep on rusting. Wheat and cotton and corn keep on piling up in warehouses. Our neighbors keep on hunting for jobs that don't exist.

N OW, it's wrong to spend our dollars foolishly, just for the sake of spending. But a lot of us are saving dollars foolishly—just for the sake of saving—without realizing that the dollar we save today has a decreased earning power compared with the dollar we saved in 1929. But the dollar we spend today is worth $1.50 in value received.

M OST prices are way down—further down than they were even in 1921. Eggs and butter and flour and clothing and furniture are way down—and that means values are way up. This is the greatest buying time we'll see again for many years.

P RETTY soon, these prices are going to start up—some prices have already started up. When they do, we'll have to pay more for the things we need right now. We shall have lost the chance to get that new suit or dress or chair or bed or radio or automobile—at a bargain!

B ESIDES, if we buy these things now, we'll put somebody to work who needs a job even worse than he needs charity. If we put him to work, he can buy the things we make or sell, and that will help us.

H ARD times? Not if we harness our dollars and hitch them to the wagon, instead of leaving them in the stable.

is worth 75c

A LOT of people feel just now like the old Negro who came to the crossroads and saw one sign pointing to heaven and another sign pointing to hell. He shook his head and said to himself: "Ef Ah goes to Heben, gotta fly all the while; ef Ah goes to Hell gotta jump all the while. Ah giss Ah'll jes' set here an' rest mahse'f."

BUT resting is rusting. This is true of dollars.

IF those of us who have money just leave it to rest—the wheels of industry keep on rusting. Wheat and cotton and corn keep on piling up in warehouses. Our neighbors keep on hunting for jobs that don't exist.

NOW, it's wrong to spend our dollars foolishly, just for the sake of spending. But a lot of us are saving dollars foolishly—just for the sake of saving—without realizing that the dollar we save today has a decreased earning power compared with the dollar we saved in 1929. But the dollar we spend today is worth $1.50 in value received.

MOST prices are way down—further down than they were even in 1921. Eggs and butter and flour and clothing and furniture are way down—and that means values are way up. This is the greatest buying time we'll see again for many years.

PRETTY soon, these prices are going to start up—some prices have already started up. When they do, we'll have to pay more for the things we need right now. We shall have lost the chance to get that new suit or dress or chair or bed or radio or automobile—at a bargain!

BESIDES, if we buy these things now, we'll put somebody to work who needs a job even worse than he needs charity. If we put him to work, he can buy the things we make or sell, and that will help us.

HARD times? Not if we harness our dollars and hitch them to the wagon, instead of leaving them in the stable.

DINNER PARTY IS ARRANGED ON BIRTHDAY.

Mr. D. A. DeWine, Spring St., was guest of honor at a delightful dinner party at his home in honor of his birthday and arranged by Mrs. DeWine Thursday evening. Fourteen guests were entertained at a 6 o'clock dinner.

Following dinner four tables of $500 were in play and high score prizes were won by Mr. J. W. Faulkner and Mrs. Bernard Kyne. Second prizes were awarded Mr. John E. Kohl and Mrs. Faulkner. Mr. DeWine was presented a gift by the guests.

Mr. and Mrs. DeWine's guests were Mr. and Mrs. J. E. Kohl, Mr. and Mrs. E. H. Hunt, Mr. and Mrs. L. A. Wagner, Mr. and Mrs. Bernard Kyne, Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Faulkner, Mr. and Mrs. Roy Spahr, this city and Mr. and Mrs. John Kyne, Spring Valley.

CHURCH SOCIETIES
HOLD JOINT MEETING.

Mrs. Louis Gray, Springfield, returned missionary from Japan, gave an interesting talk on the opportunities that country offers when she spoke before a joint meeting of the Woman's Missionary Society and the Ruth Guild of the Presbyterian Church at the home of Mrs. A. V. Perrill, N. King St., Monday evening. Mrs. Gray was accompanied here by Mrs. Rogers, also of Springfield.

Miss Fay Ledbetter conducted the devotional period and Mrs. W. H. Tiford and Miss Ruth Alexander sang a duet. A social hour followed and refreshments were served by Mrs. Perrill assisted by Mrs. Charles Kinsey and Mrs. George Tiffany.

OFFICERS ELECTED BY FRIENDS BIBLE CLASS

Mr. Willard Long was elected president of the Searchlight Bible Class of the Friends Church at a meeting in the church basement Friday evening. Other officers elected were Mr. John Bath, vice-president and Mrs. Carleton Anderson, secretary-treasurer.

A covered dish supper was served at 6:30 o'clock and there were covers for forty members and guests. The meeting opened with a devotional period led by Mrs. John Bath and Mrs. Russell Caplinger president, presided. An instructive Bible talk was given by Mrs. Earl Eavey following the business session.

COUPLE TO CELEBRATE
50TH ANNIVERSARY TUESDAY.

Mr. and Mrs. J. F. Shoemaker, Goss, O., will celebrate their golden wedding anniversary at their home Tuesday. In honor of the occasion they are extending an invitation to their friends to call between the hours of 3 and 5 p.m. and 7 and 9 p.m.

Mr. and Mrs. Shoemaker have spent their entire married life in Greene County and Mr. Shoemaker has operated a grocery and general store at Goss for a number of years.

CHOIR ENJOYS
DINNER PARTY HERE.

Twenty-four members of the choir of the Presbyterian Church enjoyed a dinner party at the home of the Rev. and Mrs. W. H. Tiford, N. Detroit St., Thursday evening. Following a chicken dinner games and music were enjoyed throughout the evening.

Friends may call at the home of the late Mr. William V. Phillips, 232 N. West St., any time Sunday afternoon or evening.

The Xenia Sunshine Society will meet with Mrs. Elton Smith, 28 W. Second St., Tuesday afternoon at 2 o'clock.

DENIES EXTORTION
CONFESSION WHICH

tinued, referring to blackmail notes written to Mr. and Mrs. T. W. Miller, demanding $1,000, and threatening harm to their child unless it was paid.

"A boy is supposed to have watched me write those letters in the back end of a speakeasy and in an automobile. If he was not guilty too, how could he have seen me write both of them?"

Newsome, caustic in his censure of authorities, indicated that he has an alibi to show that he could not have written the notes, despite his confession.

Warden Thomas questioned Newsome at length about his story of the Roby murder before the prisoner repudiated the extortion admission. The warden was not present when the repudiation statement was made.

"Did you ever loaf in your cell and think out scenario plots?" Thomas asked.

"No," Newsome answered. "What ever made you think up the story that you had a part in the Roby case?"

"That was easy. My game was plain. I wanted to get attention so I could have the Lorain case investigated. I got the details out of the papers. I admit I didn't read that Roby was killed with a lead pipe instead of a revolver."

"If you lied about the Roby case, didn't you hurt your defense on the robbery?" queried Thomas.

Newsome said he didn't believe he had.

The warden then asked Newsome for his opinion of the motives of Albert Ramer, 15, of Gallipolis, and Ellsworth Moyer, 17, of Bucyrus, who recently confessed to burning of a family of eight persons, later declaring their confessions were false and saying they only wanted to get away from the Boys' Industrial School at Lancaster.

"They only wanted something to do; they didn't have anything to fight for. They had a great imagination and wanted to use it. My case is different."

Warden Thomas said Newsome's confessions and denials constitute one of the strangest cases in recent history of the penitentiary.

ROSCOE ROCKFIELD

Roscoe P. Rockfield, 59, Main St., Fairfield, died at Miami Valley Hospital, Dayton, Friday morning at 10:55 o'clock. He had resided in Fairfield many years and had been employed at the National Cash Register Co., Dayton, twenty-three years.

Frank Currey of Yellow Springs, who is lecturer for this district, made a short address.

Supt. R. J. Warner of Bath High School was in Columbus Friday at a called meeting by the governor.

The nature of the meeting was an educational conference.

Mr. W. H. Howard of the Howard Construction Co., left for Bloomfield, Ind., where he is transacting business.

It is proposed to call the lodge, Michael L. Finnell Lodge, in honor of Mr. Finnell, who died in 1919, and who was one of Osborn's most prominent citizens, having been a thirty-third degree Mason, and active in the different Masonic bodies. His widow and son, J. B. Finnell who are now of California, have given their consent and expressed their gratification at the honor his old friends and acquaintances desire to bestow upon his name.

BIBLE THOUGHT FOR TODAY

Praise him for his mighty acts; praise him according to his excellent greatness.—Psalm cl. 2.

DOMESTIC RIDDLE

Among the riddles of the domestic universe none is more puzzling to the ordinary man than why his socks come back from the wash turned wrong side out. Shirts come back ready to be put on. But the sock, on a cold winter's morn, proves the wrong way around.

If some conscientious statistician got wind of this molehill, a mountain he might make of it. One minute lost turning the socks in one home is nothing. Multiply it by the minutes lost in the city, and the sum begins to mount. Total the nation's loss! Suppose a mere million men miss a million minutes a week turning their socks. That is equivalent to 13,000 hours, or 1600 eight-hour days, or one man working five solid years—turning socks.

Whatever satisfaction may be found in this by the man who wants a little sympathy, the time lost probably is a trifle compared with that squandered about the house in other ways. There are, for instance, the moments upon moments consumed in shifting from one suit to another those "important" papers and envelopes that he will never use. There also is the time spent—perish the thought if you can—in procrastinating as to which pair of socks to turn right side out!

If the statistician should compute the time thus employed, it very likely would be found to run into centuries in terms of a single man power. It is even probable the statistician would require an age or two to make the computation, and could do so then only at the expense of wearing his own socks inside out.

GOOD SELECTION

In selecting Gen. Charles G. Dawes to head the two billion dollar Reconstruction Corporation being authorized by Congress, President Hoover has made a choice about which there is no room for two opinions. It ought to be hailed by the Nation with unreserved approval.

Gen. Dawes has the unusual distinction of being both an outstanding financier and an outstanding statesman. He is an executive whose quality and capacity have been tried and tested in big emergencies. He knows as much as there is to be known about budgets, national and private. He commands public confidence without regard to political or geographical considerations. By appointing him President Hoover gives the Reconstruction Corporation, and, indeed, all the remedial legislation on its way through Congress, a flying start which should go far toward hastening the return of National prosperity.

If we except the presidency, Gen. Dawes today is undertaking what for the moment is probably the most difficult and taxing job in the Country. And the Country is lucky to have such a man accept it.

Gazetteers

Can't you hear Dawes chuckling over the way he put one over on the Washington correspondents and the wise and otherwise political commentators?

"Chinese Break With Japan Near," informs an Enquirer headline. Well, well, we have to go to the metropolitan newspapers for the news.

Another reason for the depression, No. 1001. Coolidge says it was a general lack of judgement. Right, no doubt, and vague enough to defy contradiction.

We are assured by an expert that the sun is good for fifteen billion years, long enough to let us wear out the old bus.

The daily reports of the Culbertson bridge match were far more interesting and exciting than the news about Schmeling and other cellulowers, or even than the news about the baseball holdouts.

Today's leading platitude as told in a headline: "The automobile ranks as a necessity." Tomorrow's will be, "We can't get along without the movie."

Today's simile—As short lived as a best seller.

Give Released Convicts Chance

By EDWIN B. SWOPE
Warden, New Mexico Penitentiary
The majority of prisoners committed to state penitentiaries are short termers. That means they have been sentenced by various district judges in the state to serve from one year up to around five years in the great bulk of cases. These sentences are the minimum.

Does society owe these men anything when they leave the prison? I believe it does.

In most cases the discharged prisoner is a branded man in his own community. Employers are reluctant to give him a job. He is known as a former convict, which is sufficient in itself to cause the populace to consider him with suspicion.

Theoretically the penitentiary is a house of correction, but the average individual does not consider discharged prisoners as "corrected." Paradoxically so long as a man remains out of the penitentiary, even though he has criminal tendencies, he is given the benefit of any doubt, usually, but once he has entered the penitentiary, the reverse becomes true.

There is justification in this attitude. Many hardened criminals are confined in the penitentiary. They are habitual criminals and a menace to society. They should never be freed. That is true in nearly every penitentiary in the country. But the majority of prisoners are first termers. Most of them will go straight when released, if they have a fair chance.

By fair chance I mean if they

MY NEW YORK

By JAMES ASWELL

NEW YORK.—Wide-eyed wanderings:

The half-yearly sales are on. Towels are so cheap now that the water supply may be endangered next summer.

Night life is growing more graceful. Waiters remember names and tastes. The question has become, not where shall we go, but whom can we ask to the house that's entertaining? Conversation may return to its own once more, even at the expense of backgammon and contract.

Do Zeppelins wear out? That little Goodyear sausage is drooping outside my window as I write. It looks only a few hundred feet away, and apparently it's in the air about 23 hours daily.

The Paul Zuckermans make a pretty couple. She was Ruth Taylor, the girl who made a hit in "Gentlemen Prefer Blondes" on the screen and had the courage to choose a home and a baby from then on. Their parties tinkle with the brightest young people of the town.

Lou Gensler, the composer-producer, who bears a curious resemblance to Russell Patterson, the illustrator, is often in the Zuckerman living room. He has an amazing talent for playing soft medleys from many hit shows, intermingling extemporized melodies to produce a unique effect.

Lou told me about the guest who left a banquet with the remark: "That speaker was so boresome I got hoarse listening to him."

MORE PEOPLE YOU KNOW

Blanche Sweet, of great movie fame in the old days, and now touring the vaudeville houses, arguing over the works of Somerset Maugham in the quiet eddy of a party—with Al Rinker, who played with Bing Crosby in Paul Whiteman's orchestra. . . . Charlie McAdam, brilliant young syndicate executive, questioning me about how I work and what papers run this column as he arranges a card deck for a trick.

Texas Guinan is back in town with bells on—ready to open another night place—gusty and up-to-roarous as ever, sporting a fantastic leopard coat. . . . Has it occurred to you how few women can get away with wearing leopard? There are people I know on whom a coat of that kind would be as absurd as a toga and peplum on Cal Coolidge. . . . But Tex can do it.

Rosalind Hightower, humorous illustrator for the old world, has gone via Farrar and Rinehart book jackets into magazine illustration. Her head of Katherine Brush, exhibited by Bretnano's, brought many inquiries. . . . Ed Tashman looked tired the other night. She and Husband Edmund Lowe are being feted by friends until a rest will do them both good.

One of the morning papers is carrying the ad: "Artistic stable to rent; great possibilities."

The same sheet carries this one a little farther down the page: "For Rent—Church, seating 800; for services, meeting, rehearsals, entertainments, studios."

WHAT FEW NEW YORKERS KNOW

That a surprising number of chorus girls in night club and musicals here hail from Hollywood, Cal.

That one of the better-known columnists of this town dictates his daily stint as a rule while being shaved.

Another Debt Expert Who Might Be Consulted!

WITNESSES EMBARRASS U. S. STATE DEPARTMENT WITH BOND TESTIMONY

WASHINGTON.—The state department has been placed in an embarrassing position by recent testimony of witnesses before the senate finance committee, indicating the department's approval of vast issues of South American public bonds, which now are in default and worth little or nothing.

Just what the department's approval was intended to signify is to be sure, a disputed question.

Senator Carter Glass of Virginia, a former secretary of the treasury, contends that it makes the United States government "morally responsible" to the present holders of the bonds in this country for any loss they may suffer. The department insists that it never had the slightest idea of guaranteeing the securities, but merely told the bankers through whom they were marketed that it had no political objection to their sale here.

Some of the banker witnesses at the senate inquiry into the foreign loan situation have testified to what they say seemed to them to be more than mere passive acquiescence by the state department in Latin American financial advances.

In the case of last June's semi-final $4,000,000 payment on the since defaulted $20,000,000 loan which New York interests were then making in installments to Colombia, hints of departmental persuasion of the bankers to remit the money, despite the Colombian administration's failure to balance its budget, which the lenders wanted done first, became so strong that have submitted records to show that they did send repeated warnings, which they charge the state department "hush, hushed," lest relations be strained between Washington and Latin American capitals.

The state department, said this explanation, "would have been derelict in its duty if it did not advise American interests that it had been informed that their attitude was the subject of misunderstanding by a foreign government."

The celebrated $100,000,000 loan to Peru during President Leguia's administration, since overthrown by revolution, did not get so clean a bill of health. The bonds sold at about 90 per cent of par, and optimists prophesy that Peru will yet redeem them at 10 or 15 cents on the dollar, but at present they are quoted only around 7.

BUDGETS FOR THE ENTIRE FAMILY

By MRS. MARY MORTON

Budgeting for the Family

If you have never budgeted, but eager to begin, I would suggest that you observe these simple rules:

1. Find out what you spend on the first place, in estimating the amount of your expenditures, there are, as I have said previously, certain expenses that vary little or not at all—rent, insurance, etc.

2. Make a list of all your expenses that you have to pay each month.

3. Make a list of all your income.

4. Make a list of all your savings.

5. Make a list of all your debts.

6. Make a list of all your expenses.

7. Make a list of all your savings.

8. Make a list of all your debts.

9. Make a list of all your expenses.

10. Make a list of all your savings.

11. Make a list of all your debts.

12. Make a list of all your expenses.

13. Make a list of all your savings.

ALL OF US

By MARSHALL MASLIN

A Dog Chased a Deer
Life and Death Went By
It Was Not Terrible

Half way up a hill we stopped the car beside the red-earth road. We were weary of driving; we wanted to look.

The forest began where we had stopped; the clearings ended. Before us were the deep woods and the shaded spots and the tall ferns and the little flowers. Behind us were the small towns and the scattered farms and the life of men who sheared the sheep and herded the cattle and ploughed the land.

It was a peaceful place to be.

But the peace did not last. Suddenly, as we watched and dreamed, there came a stir and a clamor. Out of the brush to the north sprang a deer and a dog. Lightly came the deer; wildly came the dog. The deer was of the air; almost: the dog was of the earth.

They made Death more friendly. They took the sluggishness out of Death; they took the terror out of Death.

So they see. They made Life gay; they made Death more friendly.

They took the sluggishness out of Death; they took the terror out of Death.

They took the sluggishness out of Death; they took the terror out of Death.

They took the sluggishness out of Death; they took the terror out of Death.

They took the sluggishness out of Death; they took the terror out of Death.

BIBLE THOUGHT FOR TODAY

Praise him for his mighty acts; praise him according to his excellent greatness.—Psalm cl, 2.

DOMESTIC RIDDLE

Among the riddles of the domestic universe none is more puzzling to the ordinary man than why his socks come back from the wash turned wrong side out. Shirts come back ready to be put on. But the sock, on a cold winter's morn, proves the wrong way around.

If some conscientious statistician got wind of this molehill, a mountain he might make of it. One minute lost turning the socks in one home is nothing. Multiply it by the minutes lost in the city, and the sum begins to mount. Total the nation's loss! Suppose a mere million men miss a million minutes a week turning their socks. That is equivalent to 13,000 hours, or 1600 eight-hour days, or one man working five solid years—turning socks.

Whatever satisfaction may be found in this by the man who wants a little sympathy, the time lost probably is a trifle compared with that squandered about the house in other ways. There are, for instance, the moments upon moments consumed in shifting from one suit to another those "important" papers and envelopes that he will never use. There also is the time spent—perish the thought if you can—in procrastinating as to which pair of socks to turn right side out!

If the statistician should compute the time thus employed, it very likely would be found to run into centuries in terms of a single man's power. It is even probable the statistician would require an age or two to make the computation, and could do so then only at the expense of wearing his own socks inside out.

GOOD SELECTION

In selecting Gen. Charles G. Dawes to head the two billion dollar Reconstruction Corporation being authorized by Congress, President Hoover has made a choice about which there is no room for two opinions. It ought to be hailed by the Nation with unreserved approval.

Gen. Dawes has the unusual distinction of being both an outstanding financier and an outstanding statesman. He is an executive whose quality and capacity have been tried and tested in big emergencies. He knows as much as there is to be known about budgets, national and private. He commands public confidence without regard to political or geographical considerations. By appointing him President Hoover gives the Reconstruction Corporation, and, indeed, all the remedial legislation on its way through Congress, a flying start which should go far toward hastening the return of National prosperity.

If we except the presidency, Gen. Dawes today is undertaking what for the moment is probably the most difficult and taxing job in the Country. And the Country is lucky to have such a man accept it.

Gazetteers

Can't you hear Dawes chuckling over the way he put one over on the Washington correspondents and the wise and otherwise political commentators?

"Chinese Break With Japan Near," informs an Enquirer headline. Well, well, we have to go to the metropolitan newspapers for the news.

Another reason for the depression, No. 1001. Coolidge says it was a general lack of judgement. Right, no doubt, and vague enough to defy contradiction.

We are assured by an expert that the sun is good for fifteen billion years, long enough to let us wear out the old bus.

The daily reports of the Culbertson bridge match were far more interesting and exciting than the news about Schmeling and other cuffflowers, or even than the news about the baseball holdouts.

Today's leading platitude as told in a headline: "The automobile ranks as a necessity." Tomorrow's will be, "We can't get along without the movie."

Today's simile — As short lived as a best seller.

Give Released Convicts Chance

By EDWIN B. SWOPE
Warden, New Mexico Penitentiary
The majority of prisoners committed to state penitentiaries are short termers. That means they have been sentenced by various district judges in the state to serve from one year up to around five years in the great bulk of cases. These sentences are the minimum. Does society owe these men anything when they leave the prison? I believe it does.

In most cases the discharged prisoner is a branded man in his own community. Employers are reluctant to give him a job. He is known as a former convict, which is sufficient in itself to cause the state if the prisoner only knew where to look.

Theoretically the penitentiary is a house of correction, but the average individual does not consider discharged prisoners as "corrected." Paradoxically so long as a man remains out of the penitentiary, even though he has criminal tendencies, he is given the benefit of any doubt, usually, but once he has entered the penitentiary, the reverse becomes true.

There is justification in this attitude. Many hardened criminals are confined in the penitentiary. They are habitual criminals and a menace to society. They should never be freed. That is true in nearly every penitentiary in the country. But the majority of prisoners are first termers. Most of life, he again steals, or robs, or in some way commits a felony, even as many of us would do rather than if they have a fair chance.

By fair chance I mean if they may be obtained by sending 10 cents in coin and a large stamped self-addressed envelope for each to Central Press Bureau, P. O. Box 126, Washington, D. C.: "Who's Who In Hollywood," "Seeing Washington," "Swimming," Charles P. Stewart's treatise on "Our Government," and "The World War."

MY NEW YORK

BY JAMES ASWELL

NEW YORK.—Wide-eyed wanderers:

The half-yearly sales are on. Towels are so cheap now that the water supply may be endangered next summer.

Night life is growing more graceful. Waiters remember names and tastes. The question has become, not where shall we go, but whom can we ask to the house that's entertaining? Conversation may return to its own once more, even at the expense of backgammon and contract.

Do Zeppelins wear out? That little Goodyear sausage is droning outside my window as I write. It looks only a few hundred feet away, and apparently it's in the air about 23 hours daily.

The Paul Zuckermanns make a pretty couple. She was Ruth Taylor, the girl who made a hit in "Gentlemen Prefer Blondes" on the screen and had the courage to choose a home and a baby from them on. Their parties tinkle with the brightest young people of the town.

Lou Gensler, the composer-producer, who bears a curious resemblance to Russell Patterson, the illustrator, is often in the Zuckerman living room. He has an amazing talent for playing soft medleys from many hit shows, intermingling extemporized melodies to produce a unique effect.

Lou told me about the guest who left a banquet with the remark: "That speaker was so boresome I got hoarse listening to him."

MORE PEOPLE YOU KNOW

Blanche Sweet, of great movie fame in the old days, and now touring the vaudeville houses, arguing over the works of Somerset Maugham in the quiet eddy of a party—with Al Rinker, who played with Bing Crosby in Paul Whiteman's orchestra. . . . Charlie McAdam, brilliant young syndicate executive, questioning me about how I work and what papers run this column as he arranges a card deck for a trick.

Texas Guinan is back in town with bells on—ready to open another night place—gusty and uproarious as ever, sporting a fantastic leopard coat. . . . Has it occurred to you how few women can get away with wearing leopard? There are people I know on whom a coat of that kind would be as absurd as a toga and peplum on Cal Coolidge. . . . But Tex can do it.

Rosalind Hightower, humorous illustrator for the old world, has gone via Farrar and Rinehart book jackets into magazine illustration. Her head of Katherine Brush, exhibited by Brentano's, brought many inquiries. . . . Lil Tashman looked tired the other night. She and Husband Edmund Lowe are being feted by friends until a rest will do them both good.

One of the morning papers is carrying the ad: "Artistic stable for rent; great possibilities."

The same sheet carries this one a little farther down the page: "For Rent—Church, seating 800; for services, meeting, rehearsals, entertainments, studios."

WHAT FEW NEW YORKERS KNOW

That a surprising number of chorus girls in night club and music halls here hail from Hollywood, Cal.

That one of the better-known columnists of this town dictates his daily stint as a rule while being shaved.

THE QUESTION BOX

Central Press Wash. Bureau

Answers to questions on information and fact can be obtained by writing to Central Press Bureau, 1435 East Twelfth street, Cleveland, O., and enclosing a self-addressed, stamped envelope. No answers will be given to marital, medical or legal questions, nor will the estimated value of old coins be given.

GRAB BAG

How many miles of track did the first New York subway have when it opened?

Why are the telegraph poles in India made of iron?

Another Debt Expert Who Might Be Consulted!

WASHINGTON.—The state department has been placed in an embarrassing position by recent testimony of witnesses before the senate finance committee, indicating the department's approval of vast issues of South American public bonds, which now are in default and worth little or nothing.

Just what the department's approval was intended to signify is to be sure, a disputed question.

Senator Carter Glass of Virginia, a former secretary of the treasury, contends that it makes the United States government "morally responsible" to the present holders of the bonds in this country for any loss they may suffer. The department insists that it never had the slightest idea of guaranteeing the securities, but merely told the bankers through whom they were marketed that it had no political objection to their sale here.

It is a fact, at least as long ago as the state department incumbency of Chief Justice Charles Evans Hughes, the department's custom of passing on foreign loans was adversely criticized in the senate. The department then, as now, that it was not indorsing any bonds as investments. Critics rejoined, then, that was how the departmental policy was certain to be interpreted and that it would cause trouble if defaults ever ensued.

Nevertheless, the state department persisted—through the regimes of Secretary Hughes and Secretary Frank B. Kellogg, and on into the regime of Secretary Henry L. Stimson.

And defaults HAVE ensued—to the extent, in round figures, of $850,000,000.

The prediction of trouble is verified also.

The trouble does not involve the state department alone, either.

Indeed, between the state and commerce departments it involves actual action.

Commerce departmental representatives in the defaulting republics do not relish the implication that they neglected to warn the home folk that loans in their various fields were being overdone. Consequently, these representatives have submitted records to show that they did send repeated warnings, which they charge the state department "hush, hushed," lest relations be strained between Washington and Latin American capitals.

The state department, said this explanation, "would have been derelict in its duty if it did not advise American interests that it had been informed that their attitude was the subject of misunderstanding by a foreign government."

The department felt called on to offer an explanation to the investigating committee.

BUCCANEER CHANCES IN LEAGUE GASP WEAKLY AFTER KNOCK-OUT

Loop Leaders Administer Anaesthetic In First Period, Then Finish Well Ahead On Points, 30 To 20; "Moe" Hyman Enjoys Big Evening

HERE, here now. This thing has gone far enough. As a matter of fact, it has gone too far, and it may as well be admitted that Xenia cagers have scattered to the four winds their already diminished hope of retaining their perennial Miami Valley League basketball title.

Far-sighted fans saw the handwriting on the wall two weeks ago when Sidney splintered Xenia's twenty-game league winning record into kindling wood. This was a jolt to Buccaneer court prestige. But the knockout blow was delivered at Miamisburg Friday night when the clever Burger quintet, still unbeaten in league competition this year, tacked a 30 to 20 defeat on the Bucs.

Gone, apparently, are the days when Xenia teams ruled supreme in the league. And Miamisburg, which prolonged its winning streak to three straight victories, looks as the 1932 league dictator; the possible pretender to the throne that Xenia seems certain to abdicate after a four-year reign.

Off to a discouraging start when Miamisburg compiled a lead of 11 to 3 in the first period, Xenia's basketeers rallied courageously to 12 to 11, the Bucs rapidly dropped farther and farther to the rear. Once the score was tied at 12 to 12, the Burgers indulged in a great burst of point-making. They added nine straight points to their first half total and when the third quarter ended, Xenia lagged by eight points, 21 to 13. In the final period the Bucs were again outscored, nine points to seven. The particular nemesis of Xenia was Kelly, elusive Burger guard, who alone tallied fifteen points, sinking five baskets and an equal number of free throws. Four baskets contributed by Hiehle, forward, also aided Miamisburg's cause.

The only silver lining in Xenia's cloud was the individual performances of "Moe" Hyman, center, who shed his mantle of scoring obscurity and collected eight points, besides playing a fine game otherwise. At that he was unlucky on many of his shots at the hoop.

Another redeeming feature was Xenia's surprising accuracy at the foul line, the Bucs converting six out of nine free tosses.

The preliminary contest between the reserve teams of the two schools was won also by Miamisburg, 13 to 9, said to relate.

Xenia will pay its respects to Eaton in a game on the latter's floor Saturday night, commencing at 9 o'clock. Lineups:

HOME MANAGEMENT SPECIALIST HEARD

Commenting on a third allegation that the closing order is, in effect, an admission of the failure of the state's hatchery system, the division points out that "most sportsmen are under the impression that hatchery propagation can keep up or even increase the supply of fish in our streams."

This is classed as an erroneous belief, the division stating: "It is estimated there are more than one million fishermen each year in Ohio. Assuming that each catches six fish, which certainly is a conservative estimate, it would mean at least six million food and game fishes taken from our waters each year. This is twice as many as are placed yearly from our hatcheries, Lake Erie, Lake Rockwell and Barberton, combined."

Miss Thelma Beall, home management specialist of Ohio State University, explained household accounting books and how to use them to a class of eleven beginners of a household accounting school in the Post Office Bldg., Friday afternoon.

Miss Ruth Radford, home demonstration agent of Greene County, arranged the meeting. A total of thirty-three women in the county have enrolled in the accounting class.

FRAMED by Phil

Pending settlement of controversy now in progress, Elwood D. Stroup, Greene County game warden, reveals that he does not expect to enforce rigidly an order of the State Conservation Council ordering certain of the unpolluted streams of Ohio closed to fishing for two and one-half years.

The order, made upon the recommendation of William H. Reinhart, conservation commissioner, was supposed to become effective January 2.

Under terms of the decree, Caesar creek and all its tributaries, including Anderson fork and all its branches, from its source to state highway route No. 73, in the counties of Greene, Clinton and Warren, would be closed until July 2, 1934.

Recently the conservation council, in particular the conservation commissioner, have been the target of criticisms by sportsmen.

Warden Stroup also discloses that more than twenty-five jobless men have made application to him to be employed in patrolling Caesar creek in connection with enforcement of the council's closing decree as it applies locally.

Warden Stroup has received a bulletin issued by the state department of agriculture, division of conservation, in which the order, closing approximately 4,142 miles of streams for fishing and bait purposes, is defended.

Most of the criticism is apparently directed at the fact care was taken not to include and so-called polluted streams in the decree.

According to the division, many sportsmen are under the general impression the conservation commission has control over stream pollution.

This is not so, the division asserts. This function is under the direct supervision of the state health department. The department, it is claimed, has cooperated with the conservation division with regard to the protection of fish life as much as possible, but it can act only to prevent damage to public health and welfare. The bulletin adds:

It is apparent that certain forms of pollution cannot be remedied under existing statutes, as certain kinds may be highly destructive to fish life, but not to public health and welfare. Even if the division had supreme control over the pollution problem, any drastic action at this time of business depression, against pollution coming from our cities or factories would be impractical, as the governor has well said."

To the charge that discrimination was practiced in the cases of a few counties, the division responds that whenever feasible, one-third of the unpolluted streams in each county was closed, but due to the difference in stream mileage and other vital factors in the various counties, some of the counties contain more closed mileage than others, and a few have no closed areas whatever.

In the majority of cases, the streams chosen were those best suited for our best fishes, such as the small-mouth and spotted black basses, rock bass, crappies and catfish," the bulletin explains. "Not only were the larger streams closed, but in most cases, the smallest tributaries. This was done to protect the minnows as they are of major importance as food for our game fishes. In 1930, 6,789,172 minnows were reported taken from our streams by commercial minnow dealers. This does not include minnows taken by fishermen."

By closing these streams to fishing, they can be stocked successfully, it is declared. Heretofore, breeder and immature fish have been caught before they had a chance to spawn or reach the legal length. The drought also resulted in a decrease of fish life.

Commenting on a third allegation that the closing order is, in effect, an admission of the failure of the state's hatchery system, the division points out that "most sportsmen are under the impression that hatchery propagation can keep up or even increase the supply of fishes in our streams."

This is classed as an erroneous belief, the division stating: "It is estimated there are more than one million fishermen each year in Ohio. Assuming that each catches six fish, which certainly is a conservative estimate, it would mean at least six million food and game fishes taken from our waters each year. READ THIS FIRST:
Marcia Moyer is a very beautiful young girl demonstrator of beauty products, traveling over the country. In her small home city she has left her family and Ted Stanton, a young mechanic who is in love with her. But she wants to see the world and find romance. After she leaves Mitchellfield, a mysterious aviator lands there, falls in love with her sister, Vivian, and engages Ted for his mechanic. After many regular visits, he fails to appear or send word, and Vivian is greatly grieved. Meanwhile, on the train to Detroit, Marcia meets a handsome and distinguished secret service official who is attracted to her and introduces her to his wealthy friends, the Bothwells. They are invited to a party where the girl wears pajamas, so she selects a beautiful pair for the occasion and enjoys the unique party of human backgammon and swimming in the floodlighted garden pool. At the party, Marcia meets Kerry Welland, son of a motor magnate who is attracted to her. Gilmore makes love to her on the way home, tells her that he cannot decide if he loves her until he has been away from her for awhile, but Marcia is not ready to give up her adventure for anyone. She wants to see more of the world. On Sunday, she drives over into Canada with Turner, where they have a picnic supper. After the picnic, they have a long pleasant talk about life and love in the next day but promises to see her soon. Gilmore flies his plane north for observations and then stops in Toronto to send some messages. At the airport, two other flyers secretly disable his plane and take him away with them by force. Marcia has not heard from Gilmore since Jean invites her to a party, so she sends Kerry Welland after her. The party ends by going to the Club X for the rest of the night.

(NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY)

CHAPTER 30

WHEN the party finally decided that there was little more to be had at the Club X, they staggered out to their parked cars to find the world looked pretty tawdry in its dim, but merciful light. Even the expensive frocks and wraps appeared disheveled and wilted, the motor cars were less gleaming, the deserted streets stripped of night glamor, and midday interest.

Marcia was tired, and her head ached from the combination of noise, smoke, high tension, excitement and sleep delayed. Such parties might be all right for these girls who could go home, draw the shades and sleep all day if they desired; but she had a long day of work before her. She climbed wearily into Kerry's car. Only the early morning air was sharply refreshing.

"You don't want to go home yet, do you?" Kerry asked her. He was flushed and rambling with his speech, and Marcia had extended her endurance far enough ahead to reach the seclusion of her room. "Well, whenever should I go, if not now?" she inquired with disappointment. "Don't you ever get enough?"

"Not you? Listen, darling, I have an apartment in town not far from here. Why don't we go there now? Better still, why don't you move over there and stay? There is no reason in the world why a girl like you should be working, you know." His face was close to hers, and his hot breath was odorous against her cheek.

Anger welled up and consumed Marcia. She had done nothing to justify this proposal—rather the contrary—but she guessed that there were people for whom there could be no comprehension of decency. At the same moment, Kerry moved to take her in his arms, but Marcia whirled around and struck him sharply on the face with her hand. The gesture had been a spontaneous effort of self-defense, and she was quite as surprised over it as Kerry was. They faced each other for an amazed moment, while he put up his hand tentatively to touch his cheek. The blow had sobered him somewhat, but his reaction was apparently one of amusement more than anything else.

He laughed dully, "He who gets slapped—by a hot little red-head, had better take her home as he found her. Where to, innocent?"

Marcia accepted the rebuke as more of a compliment than the censure which he had intended it to be, and named her hotel.

His lips curled with unconcealed disdain. "A few minutes ago, I should have said that that was no place for a girl like you. But it may be the best place for you, after all. At least, you are safe, aren't you, until you venture out, and meet up with a beast like me?" His tone was scornful with wounded pride and sudden denial.

"You are just right about that," Marcia agreed, coldly.

"From fire to ice," he commented, driving recklessly down the deserted avenue. Marcia was grateful that he would spare the lamp posts and other obstructions on each side. "Is that the way you entertain Gilmore?"

"Turner Gilmore is a gentleman."

"Is that so? And I am not, am I to infer? Just for that, I think I can tell him and Jean and some of the others an interesting little story."

"You wouldn't dare!" she sat up with consternation. She did not know the fury of a woman scorned is only surpassed by the cruelty of an angered, indulged man.

"Oh, wouldn't I? It happens that I can do anything I choose," she scathingly.

"Oh—that!" he cruelly dismissed her as of no further consequence. "I should probably have changed my mind about you very soon."

"That was just what I thought."

"Yeah. Well, here we are, little Prudence. Back the next day all safe and sound. I doubt if they will let you in this righteous establishment at this disgraceful hour. Shall I go in with you and sign an affidavit for your character? I can do that in all honesty, you know."

"I don't think your signature would be of any value in vouching for anyone's character. Thank you, and good-bye." She got out of the car unassisted.

"Good-bye," he said, "and many happy returns of the day."

Marcia roused the elevator boy with a guilty conscience that she imagined was betrayed in her every act and expression. Had she not been so chagrined by Kerry's treatment of her, she would have known that dawn arrivals of hotel guests were only part of the night's work. In fact, it was the very reason and purpose for having a night operator on the elevator.

She reached her room with a vast sense of relief and hurried in to a hot bath. Later, she lay on the bed for a brief rest before going to the store, and reviewed the strange events of the night in her saner proportions. She realized that she had made too much of them in the light of her past experience; in fact, had been quite "Mitchellfield" in her reactions. And resolved that hereafter, she should maintain her standards in a more sophisticated manner. Kerry probably had not been half so serious in his proposal as she had been in her consideration of it, and she concluded that she had more than half deserved his scornful comments. Her face burned with the memory of them, as she reflected that the same proposition, offered by another man, might present an entirely different kind of problem, depending upon the motive and conditions which prompted it overcame with weariness, she slept.

When Marcia left Detroit the following Sunday morning, she had no further word from Turner Gilmore. Her emotions were a mixture of anxiety for his welfare, desire to see him again, bitterness over the possibility that he had neglected her voluntarily, fear that Kerry had influenced his opinion of her, and determination to forget everyone and everything, and devote herself to her work. It was by far the most gratifying and remunerative course she could follow, and it promised her more of what she wanted than anything else she had found.

Her program called for a succession of one-week stops in Ann Arbor, Jackson, Toledo, Sandusky, Lorain and two weeks in Cleveland. Another month later would find her in New York. During those uneventful weeks, Marcia half hoped to hear from Turner, but she was soon convinced that she was not in love with him. Her longing to see him would have been more acute, she knew, had he been more important in her affections. She still wondered seriously if he might have encountered serious trouble, but she did not lose her mental balance over his absence, and her mirror had assured her that she did not look "sick," as Ted had declared Vivian appeared to be.

Vivian had written her one pitiful, near-confidential letter about the shattering of her romance, and ended it with a note of bitter philosophy that seemed to Marcia to be all out of proportion to the incident. She guessed, however, that Marcia, knowing about such experience, Vivian, with her two years less of life, had lived beyond Marcia. So had her own aviator disappeared suddenly into the skies and failed to come back, but the fact left her only with disappointment and vague wonder.

Her heart ached for VI, but there seemed nothing that she could do about it. If Vivian had been in physical danger, or in any difficulty from which she could have rescued her, Marcia would have gone to her without delay. But, she guessed to the seclusion of her room. "Well, whenever should I go, if not now?" she inquired with disappointment.

"Not you? Listen, darling, I have an apartment in town not far from here. Why don't we go there now? Better still, why don't you move over there and stay? There is no reason in the world why a girl like you should be working, you know." His face was close to hers, and his hot breath was odorous against her cheek.

Anger welled up and consumed Marcia. She had done nothing to justify this proposal—rather the contrary—but she guessed that there were people for whom there could be no comprehension of decency. At the same moment, Kerry moved to take her in his arms, but Marcia whirled around and struck him sharply on the face with her hand. The gesture had been a spontaneous effort of self-defense, and she was quite as surprised over it as Kerry was. They faced each other for an amazed moment, while he put up his hand tentatively to touch his cheek. The blow had sobered him somewhat, but his reaction was apparently one of amusement more than anything else.

He laughed dully, "He who gets slapped—by a hot little red-head, had better take her home as he found her. Where to, innocent?"

Marcia accepted the rebuke as more of a compliment than the censure which he had intended it to be, and named her hotel.

His lips curled with unconcealed disdain. "A few minutes ago, I should have said that that was no place for a girl like you. But it may be the best place for you, after all. At least, you are safe, aren't you, until you venture out, and meet up with a beast like me?" His tone was scornful with wounded pride and sudden denial.

She had gone home to dinner one night with Alma Kearns, who lived in a Lakewood suburb, and had been prevailed upon to remain the night. The Kearns home might have been a copy of her own, had her father lived; and it was not to the discredit of worldly-ambitious Marcia that a wave of homesickness threatened to engulf her that night. She had to hold her breath, and steady herself against the force of the wave as she rode over it and came up dashing the water from her eyes, which she discovered to be salty tears.

There was no possibility of comparing it with the Bothwell mansion. The house was only a semi-bungalow that was similar to the long street of houses which led them half way down its length, away from the street car line; but a sense of peace and rest filled it. A good place to which a working man might return at night to recuperate for the exacting demands of another day. It was one of those typical American homes where there is more comfort and pleasure. The day was one of autumn's first chill warnings of a drastic change in seasons, and the air echoed crisply with the sound of children's voices, as Marcia walked down the street with Alma, their children beating a sharp tattoo on the sidewalk.

It was during her fortnight in Cleveland that events occurred which left far more important and definite impressions upon her own life. She was stationed in a very modernly beautiful department of a new store on the Public Square, where she felt more like an actress playing a part in a big production than a mere demonstration of cosmetics. Her days benefited by the fact that the establishment had only been recently opened to the public. She also made the acquaintance of several nice girls, which was a gratifying diversion from the series of masculine friendships which had proved to be more or less disturbing to her peace of mind.

She had gone home to dinner one night with Alma Kearns, who lived in a Lakewood suburb, and had been prevailed upon to remain the night. The Kearns home might have been a copy of her own, had her father lived; and it was not to the discredit of worldly-ambitious Marcia that a wave of homesickness threatened to engulf her that night. She had to hold her breath, and steady herself against the force of the wave as she rode over it and came up dashing the water from her eyes, which she discovered to be salty tears.

There was no possibility of comparing it with the Bothwell mansion. The house was only a semi-bungalow that was similar to the long street of houses which led them half way down its length, away from the street car line; but a sense of peace and rest filled it. A good place to which a working man might return at night to recuperate for the exacting demands of another day. It was one of those typical American homes where there is more comfort and pleasure. The day was one of autumn's first chill warnings of a drastic change in seasons, and the air echoed crisply with the sound of children's voices, as Marcia walked down the street with Alma, their children beating a sharp tattoo on the sidewalk.

COUNTY ENTITLED TO SIX DELEGATES

Greene County's Republican organization is entitled to send six delegates to the party's state convention under the convention approvement plan adopted by the Republican State Central Committee at Columbus Thursday. These delegates are expected to be elected by the party voters at the May primary, and candidates, if precedent is followed, must file their petitions of candidacy by March 18.

DEMOCRATS SELECT TEN DELEGATES FOR DISTRICT MEETING

Election of ten delegates to represent the Democracy of Greene County at a Democratic convention of the Seventh Congressional District in Springfield February 10, took place at a recent meeting of the county Democratic Executive Committee, according to H. A. Higgins, Xenia, committee chairman. Ten alternates were also selected.

The district conclave, to be attended by delegates from the nine counties embraced in the district, will be held at 1:30 p. m. Wednesday, February 10, in the Shawnee Hotel at Springfield.

The meeting has been called by T. E. Dye, Urbana, member of the Democratic State Central Committee from this district, for the purpose of selecting two delegates and two alternates to the Democratic National Convention, and also to select one presidential elector.

Each county in the district is entitled to one delegate for each 500 votes or fraction thereof, more than 250 votes of the total vote cast for Governor George White at the November, 1930 election, in the respective counties.

Greene County's number of delegates is exceeded in the district only by Clark County, which will be represented by twenty-five. The total number is eighty-nine delegates. Logan County will have nine delegates. Champaign, Fayette and Union will have eight each. Clinton, Madison and Warren seven each.

The ten delegates elected to represent Greene County are: H. A. Higgins, H. C. Sohn, Dr. W. J. Madison, H. M. Fisher, William Kearny and George Henkel, all of Xenia; H. W. Badgley, Spring Valley; W. T. Naragon, Osborn; H. L. Hackett, Yellow Springs, and Mrs. Bess Robinson, Jamestown.

The ten alternates chosen are: E. Dawson Smith and Mrs. Lester Lane, both of Xenia; Ralph Alexander and Mrs. Anna Krug, Spring Valley; Alpheus Anderson, Xenia; Jasper; Ray Hite, Bowersville, Ralph Kendig, Beavercreek; William Jobe, Belbrook; Arthur Alexander and Howard Batdorf, Osborn.

CAMPBELL TO SPEAK AT CHILD WELFARE CONFERENCE SOON

Col. Milton D. Campbell, Cincinnati, a trustee of the O. S. and S. O. Home, will be a speaker at the American Legion child welfare conference at Hotel Sinton-St. Nicholas, Cincinnati, February 5 and 6.

"Wholesome Recreational Facilities for the Child as Character and Health Builder and Preventive of Child Delinquency" is the topic of the address to be delivered at the opening session by Col. Campbell, who is national child welfare chairman of the Forty and Eight Society and national vice chairman of the Legion's child welfare committee.

Subjects of vital importance to the child welfare program of the Legion and its auxiliary will be discussed and studied at the conference.

This will be the annual Area D or Midwestern conference and will be attended by representatives from the thirteen states in the area.

An outstanding feature of the two-day meeting will be a school of instruction to be conducted, February 6, under the direction of Miss Emma C. Puschner, national child welfare director of the Legion.

Another feature will be reports from the different states in the Area showing the progress of child welfare work since the last conference. Child welfare legislative work for 1932 will be discussed by Col. Campbell at this school of instruction.

Superintendents of state soldiers' and sailors' orphans' homes in Ohio, Illinois, Indiana, Iowa and Pennsylvania, including Capt. H. L. Hays of the O. S. and S. O. Home in Xenia, will attend the conference.

The group attending the meeting will visit the state orphanage in this city Sunday, February 7.

OHIO FARM BUREAU OFFICIAL TO ADDRESS ANNUAL MEETING HERE

E. J. Bath, legislative agent of the Ohio Farm Bureau Federation will be principal speaker at the annual Greene County Farm Bureau meeting Tuesday, in the assembly room of the Court House. The meeting will begin promptly at 10 a. m., with music by the Caesar Creek Orchestra under direction of Emery Giesbee.

The Rev. Wm. H. Tifford, pastor of the Presbyterian Church, Xenia, will give the invocation, followed by the president's address by David C. Bradfute. Reports will be given by the Farm Bureau treasurer, Agricultural Credit Co., Livestock Shipping Association, Cooperative Milk Association and Extension Agents.

Report of the resolution committee will be given by J. R. Kimber, chairman.

A committee of Farm Bureau women with Miss Ruth Radford, chairman, will serve an oyster soup dinner in the Court House basement at a cost of ten cents each serving.

The afternoon session will include music by the Caesar Creek Orchestra, followed by report of the nominating committee, election of the three women directors at large, and addresses by Mr. Bath.

Mr. Bath, who is legislative director and daily radio speaker over Station WAIU for the Ohio Farm

THREE NEW MEMBERS FAVORED FOR BOARD OF ELECTIONS HERE

Dr. W. R. McChesney, president of Cedarville College, will be guest speaker at a special service at Central Presbyterian Church, Dayton, Sunday evening. His subject will be "Youth's Vision." The Cedarville College girls' glee club, composed of twenty members, will sing and the Revelers' quartet of the college, will also sing.

Harry C. Sohn, Xenia druggist, is in possession of the endorsement of the Democratic committee for appointment to a four-year term as a successor to James Jones, Beavercreek, whose term expires. Jones has served two consecutive terms.

Darrell Kline, Osborn, formerly of Bowersville, will succeed Joseph Conklin, New Burlington Pike, and Erskine M. Winter, Xenia, will replace Walton Spahr, Xenia, as the two new Republican members.

Conklin's term on the board expires. Spahr, chief deputy sheriff of Greene County, the other Republican member, had two more years of his term to serve, but his resignation was submitted to the Republican Executive Committee Friday night, and Winter was endorsed for appointment to fill the unexpired term.

Mrs. Bess Robinson, Jamestown, is the second Democratic member. Her term does not expire and she will be the sole survivor of the turnover in the board's personnel. The appointments for new four-year terms become effective March 1, and are made by Secretary of State Clarence Brown on the recommendation of the respective party organizations.

DR. M'CHESNEY TO SPEAK IN DAYTON

A meeting of the federal hospitalization board of the U. S. Veterans Bureau, which is considering a site for a hospital to be built probably in Ohio, is scheduled for next Wednesday, according to dispatches.

About twenty Ohio communities, including Xenia, are bidding for the institution. It is also learned that the state of Virginia has asked the board to consider the facilities of several communities in that state, which the board has agreed to do at its meeting Wednesday. Whether a final decision will be

Then, if you prefer to drive in standard gear, pull out the button and take advantage of Syncro-Mesh—the very last word in transmission! Syncro-Mesh is exclusive to Chevrolet in the lowest price field. It gives you, easy, non-clash shifting through all gears—even permits the safety feature of changing quickly from high back to second at any speed.

Never has the actual driving of a Chevrolet Six meant so much as it does today. Come into our showroom, as soon as you can. View Chevrolet's ultra-modern styling, already the topic of conversation everywhere. Inspect the many new refinements and appointments. See the numerous improvements made throughout the chassis to meet the demands of Chevrolet's greater performance. Then, take a drive. Faster, livelier, smoother, easier to handle, more delightful to control—this car gives performance-thrills you've never had in any low-priced car.
